

A Change for the better

The biggest obstacle for UK women to adopt alternative forms of sanitary protection is the prospect of a change, despite the potential health, economic, environmental and comfort benefits.

Phoebe Grant, 22 and a Sea Pearls user for over 12 months says “When I talk to a lot of my friends about Sea Pearls, they seem to really struggle with the concept, so much that I find it difficult to understand where they are coming from. I was a traditional tampon user but I just felt there had to be an easier and more comfortable solution. After finding Sea Pearls, it was like finding that missing piece of jigsaw. The piece slotted in and suddenly the whole, bigger picture became much clearer. They are the most natural, easy solution to my periods. Now when I try to see it from other people’s points of view this just seems the only sensible option. I can’t imagine how anyone copes using anything else, they aren’t difficult to use, they don’t leak and they are so comfortable I never even know I’m wearing one. It just makes so much sense!”

Phoebe continues “The biggest obstacle seems to be the fear of change - if it’s not broken why fix it? But sadly this blinkered view prevents a whole host of women from enjoying the benefits products like Sea Pearls have to offer. They’re environmental, they’re economical, they’re healthy and more importantly, they’re without doubt the most comfortable tampon I have ever experienced. All it takes is to give it go for a few months and once you’ve taken the plunge and tried them, you’ll never go back!”
